Managing the Generational Mix

Never before in history have we had the situation where organisations have consisted of such a large expanse of generations. We're now familiar with the labels, Gen Y, Gen X, Baby Boomers, Traditionalists and more recently the Millennials. What hasn't been explored is the unique issues and opportunities this creates for today's leaders and the leaders of the future.

Our programs are for those trying to lead, work with, sell to or understand an age-diverse workforce. They can be presented in a variety of formats, covering an entire day, half day or as several 2 hour modules, depending upon your organisation's needs. Working with our Alliance partners, Mieza is in the unique position of being able to assist organisations through:

- Building awareness: engaging the leadership, building the business case, understanding the demographics, designing the strategy, and conducting discrimination/EEO audits.
- Diagnostics: understanding what is your organisation's current and future age mix? Diversity audits, demographic profiling and benchmarking, career/life stage/retirement intentions sessions and focus groups.
- Specific interventions: breaking through misconceptions - are mature workers different? What do mature workers look for in organisations? Societal influences & demographic changes – what is really happening? Are your leaders sufficiently aware & skilled to offer and manage flexible working arrangements? How to attract, retain and sustain multiple generations.

Examples of successful interventions include:

- Leading mature workers workshops
- Key talent/skill/function identification
- Work, workplace and work/life re-design
- Retirement/transition intentions programs
- Strategic workforce planning solutions
- Financial literacy & wealth creation workshops
- Mentoring – including reverse mentoring
- Flexible working: strategy & implementation
- Age and gender profiles, succession planning
- Leadership development
